► The percentage of money that Canadian consumers owe relative to their disposable income may have levelled off last year — but the amount borrowed and the way it's borrowed continue to cause concerns, according to Moody's Investors Service.

"Canadian consumers continue to repay their debts, but remain highly vulnerable to an employment shock, posing significant asset risk to banks in an adverse economic scenario," says a report from the credit-rating agency, which is set to be released Thursday morning.

The level of Canadian consumer debt that's outstanding "stabilized" at 174 per cent of disposable income in the last three months of 2018, the report says. Furthermore, unemployment is hovering near a 40-year low at 5.8 per cent, helping to keep borrowers from defaulting on their loans, according to Moody's.

However, the credit-rating agency notes that higher interest rates helped increase the amount of that disposable income going towards paying down debt, hiking it to 14.5 per cent in the fourth quarter of 2018 from 13.7 per cent in 2013.

Mortgage payments rose to 6.6 per cent of disposable income in the fourth quarter, up from 6.1 per cent five years ago. <http://bit.ly/2Jin2SA>

► The parent company of retailer Gap says it will close stores in Canada as part of a global plan to shutter almost half of the brand's locations over the next two years.

Gap Inc. is refusing to tell The Canadian Press exactly how many of the 230 stores it is closing will be in Canada, but says the majority of international network closures will be in North America. The company is expecting the closures to deliver an annualized sales loss of about US$635 million, but says the move should bring about $90 million in annual pre-tax savings.

Gap says it hopes the closures and moves it is making to modernize its marketing will help it develop future growth in its stores, outlets and online offerings. <http://bit.ly/2CkbWXg>

► Richmond based Paper Excellence now owns three pulp and paper mills owned by Catalyst Paper.

The formal transfer of ownership was marked Monday, March 18 in Crofton, where one of the three Catalyst mills is located. The acquisition also includes Catalyst's distribution centre in Surrey, and mills in Port Alberni and Powell River.

Paper Excellence has not divulged how much it paid to acquire Catalyst, which has struggled financially for a decade, thanks in part to declining demand for newsprint and other paper products in the digital age.

Catalyst, previously a publicly traded company, nearly went bankrupt in 2012, when it sought creditor protection, and emerged from that experience as a private company. Last year, it was singled out by the U.S. with punishing duties on newsprint, although they were later lifted.

Catalyst employs 1,600 workers in BC and is Crofton's largest employer, so the mill's closure would be a major blow to the community.

In an attempt to make more fibre available to both sawmills and pulp and paper mills, the NDP government is implementing its Coast Forest Sector Revitalization plan, which aims to reduce log exports and make more wood waste available to pulp and paper mills.

Paper Excellence owns the Howe Sound Pulp and Paper mill and Skookumchuk mill near Cranbrook. It also owns a mill in Nova Scotia, one in Saskatchewan and two in France.

After acquiring the Howe Sound mill, Paper Excellence invested $150 million to modernize it, and invested $50 million in the former Tembec mill in Chetwynd. <http://bit.ly/2UKQkus>
